2013 Youth Scholarship Winning Essay

The United States Navy Core Values are Honor, Courage and Commitment:

How do they apply in daily life?

The United States Navy proudly adopted the values Honor, Courage and Commitment in 1997, from their sister service the United States Marine Corps. Honor, courage and commitment are a vital part of my daily life as well, even though I am not in the military. Honor not only has to do with honesty, fairness and integrity in my own belief, but also asking whether or not a decision is right for others around me.

Courage every day means overcoming your fears in spite of yourself. I had the courage to win third place in a public speaking contest and to speak in front of the senior class council to gain approval for the seniors to wear 4-H cords at graduation. I have the courage not only to speak up for myself but also to speak up for others.

Not only do you have to be honorable and courageous, but you also have to be committed and follow through. I have committed myself to maintaining all A's throughout high school while being able to volunteer with organizations such as Farragut Films, 4-H and the charity Badge of Benevolence. Support our Troops.
